The College of Chemistry and Chemical Engineering at Xiamen University was established in 1991, on the basis of the Chemistry Discipline that was founded in 1921. Thru the tremendous efforts made by several generations of Chemists, as represented by Jiaxi Lu, former President of the Chinese Academy of Sciences (1981-1987), the College has been recognized as one of the leading institutions in China for chemical research, education, and training of our future chemists.

Deemed as China's "cleanest city," Xiamen is an ancient island community in the Fujian province that continues to top vacation destination lists. Xiamen is located around the west bank of the Pacific Ocean and along the southeast coast of China. It is rich in cultural heritage with a number of attractions including one of China's oldest temples, Nanputuo Temple, which was built in the Tang Dynasty. The car-free island of Gulangyu is just a 10-minute ferry ride away and Sunlight Rock is Xiamen's highest point offering fine views.
